Property Description

The Thai Ministry of Transport’s recent proposal for a 600 million baht emergency fund to accelerate the long-delayed construction work on Rama 2 Road marks a potential turning point in one of Thailand’s most crucial infrastructure projects.
This significant investment isn’t just about improving a road; it’s about reshaping the future of transportation, tourism, and economic development in Thailand’s southern provinces.
Rama 2 Road, officially known as Highway 35, has been a source of both promise and frustration for decades.
Since its inception in 1970, this vital artery connecting Bangkok to the southern provinces has undergone numerous expansions and improvements.
What began as a modest four-lane highway has grown into a sprawling 14-lane thoroughfare.
Yet, despite these expansions, the road has struggled to
