Property Description

In what represents one of Thailand’s most ambitious infrastructure undertakings in the Gulf region, the Expressway Authority of Thailand (EXAT) has unveiled detailed plans for a ?40 billion bridge connecting Koh Samui with the mainland.
This transformative project, spanning 25 kilometres across the Gulf of Thailand channel and expected to open for operation in 2033, promises to fundamentally reshape accessibility to Thailand’s second-largest island and, by extension, the dynamics of its property market.
For property investors monitoring Southeast Asian island markets, infrastructure developments of this magnitude demand careful attention. Throughout the region’s development history, major accessibility improvements have consistently preceded significant property value appreciation, as destinations transition from limited-access exclusivity to mainstream accessibility while retaining their natural appeal.
