Property Description

The Bank of Thailand delivered a surprise rate cut on 26 February 2026, lowering the benchmark policy rate by 25 basis points to 1.
75 percent — and the Monetary Policy Committee signaled further easing ahead, with markets now pricing in a path toward 1.
0 percent by mid-year.
The decision, which caught a majority of economists off guard, represents a decisive shift in Thailand’s monetary stance and carries significant implications for the country’s property market, particularly in high-demand resort destinations such as Hua Hin.
The rate reduction follows mounting evidence of slowing economic growth, subdued inflation running well below the BOT’s target band, and increasing pressure from Thailand’s new government to stimulate domestic consumption.
For property investors — both Thai nationals financing purchases through
