Property Description

Euromonitor International's Top 100 City Destinations Index confirmed what tourism professionals and property investors have long suspected: Bangkok is not merely competing with the world's great cities for tourist attention—it has decisively surpassed them.
The Thai capital attracted approximately 30.
3 million international visitors in 2025, substantially outperforming Hong Kong (23.
2 million), London (22.
7 million), Macau (20.
4 million), and Istanbul, Dubai, Mecca, Antalya, Paris, and Kuala Lumpur, which completed the top ten.
For property investors focused on Thailand's Gulf Coast destinations, this global recognition might seem tangential—after all, Bangkok is a very different market from Hua Hin.
However, the relationship between national tourism brand strength and secondary destination performance is both well-documented and increasingly relevant to investment analysis.
Bangkok's dominance as the world's most
