Property Description

The short version Hua Hin is the driest of 25 coastal weather stations in Thailand's official 1991 to 2020 records, at 936 mm of rain a year; Phuket gets 2,272 mm and Koh Samui 1,994 mm. Hua Hin's wettest months are September and October; Koh Samui's are October to December, so the island stays comparatively dry from May to September, through most of Phuket and Krabi's May-to-October wet season.
Average temperatures are almost the same on every coast, about 28 °C; Hua Hin's real advantage is the lowest humidity of the coastal stations compared.
Hua Hin's air is not haze-free: IQAir put its 2019 average PM2.
5 at 21 µg/m³, four times the WHO guideline, worst in November and December and cleanest from June to August.
